JOINTLY & TRANSACTIONDESK TRANSITION FAQS

unlock MLS

What is Transact?

Transact is the new transaction management platform provided by Lone Wolf, which also owns and operates both TransactionDesk and zipForm. Access to the agent version of Transact is provided through Texas REALTORS® membership. More details about Transact can be found here.

When will TransactionDesk no longer be offered through Unlock MLS?

TransactionDesk will no longer be offered through Unlock MLS in early December. At that time, an agent can use zipForm or Transact through a Texas REALTORS® membership or consider an option like Jointly. Brokers can use the agent level of Transact, zipForm or Jointly at no additional cost, however utilizing the broker-level of these platforms will cost an additional fee.

What is Jointly?

Jointly is a newly launched transaction management platform that can be found on your Unlock MLS Dashboard. All Unlock MLS subscribers have access to the Jointly Starter level of the tool, as well as a 20% discount on the Jointly Pro and broker level versions of the software. Learn more about Jointly here.

What's included in the Jointly Starter level?

The Jointly Starter level gives you all the essential tools to draft compliance-ready contracts and includes access to all Unlock MLS and TREC forms, as well as Texas REALTORS® forms for those with active membership. These forms can be auto populated with Unlock MLS data and also be used with the native Jointly e-signature function.

I'm an agent. How does my access to forms change?

Agents can continue accessing forms and using other features in TransactionDesk until the platform is no longer provided in December. Agents can also begin using Jointly or Transact at any time.

I'm a broker. How does my access to forms and transaction management for my office change?

Brokers will continue to have access to the broker-level of TransactionDesk and Transact until TransactionDesk is no longer provided in December; at that time, brokers will lose access to the platforms unless services are continued directly with Lone Wolf at an additional cost. Brokers can also begin using Jointly with an exclusive 20% discount to the broker features of the platform.